

Enjoy the 2010 FIFA World Cup via DVB-T with Cinergy T Stick Black

It all kicks off next month: The excitement of a World Cup tournament is hard to resist, and all eyes will be looking to South Africa. Now is the time to gear up to catch the best matches, and TerraTec Electronic has the right solution for everyone who wants to enjoy all the competition. Specializing in multimedia solutions, the Nettetal-based company has released Cinergy T Stick Black, a mobile TV-on-the-computer package that brings the action in Africa to everyone, even those on a tight budget. Priced at 29.99 euros, this USB stick is available end of May to enable digital TV (DVB-T) on the go.

The package also features TerraTec Home Cinema Basic, a TV software application optimized specifically to afford viewers even greater convenience. All the user has to do is select a sports broadcast using the electronic program guide (EPG). The computer then boots automatically at the start of the program and shuts down again when the show has aired to conserve energy. And the “boss alert” function comes in very hand at the office: If the supervisor stops by during a World Cup match, the viewer can minimize the entire application, mute the audio, and activate the time-shift function with a single THC key combination. When the boss moves on again, the viewer can resume watching the broadcast at the point of interruption. The viewer never misses a goal – full coverage guaranteed!

This application also turns notebooks and PCs into powerful video recorders. Updates are loaded automatically, ensuring the Cinergy user’s PC always runs the latest version of THC. It offers a host of convenient features beyond the aforementioned time-shifted viewing, including automatic start-up from standby or sleep modes and subtitles (teletext and DVB) that may be hidden and viewed at will. TerraTec Home Cinema Basic supports all prevailing European standards.
